About the Book

This book serves as an introduction and guide in understanding further the powers and jurisdiction of Courts in Malaysia.

The last two years has been interesting with many new cases being decided in the Court of Appeal and Federal Court as to whether the respective courts can review their own decisions. There has also been a string of cases whereby the Federal Court has ruled that it cannot review decisions of the Court of Appeal which are final in nature. The Juvenile Court has now been renamed as the Court for Children whilst the newly created Special Court has heard a few cases since its establishment. There has also been a renewed debate as to whether the Court of Appeal can decline to follow the decision of the Federal Court even though the decision has been wrongly decided.
